Dear Hiring Team,

I am a student expecting to graduate with a Bachelor of Arts in Linguistics and African Languages from Boston University. I believe it's very important to expand language access in education, both for the speakers and people who want to speak it. This position at McGraw Hill will give me an entry into this field and provide key skills for this application toward my dreams.

Through my studies I have gained an appreciation and love for truth, and a deeper love for sharing the truth in effective and memorable ways. It is thus that I have taken to language tutoring, both paid for Spanish and free for Swahili to support my school's African Studies Center. Through my work at Chick-Fil-A, I have gained a love for creating experiences, perfecting the mundane in a way that makes it memorable, and most importantly, in a way that invites customers to be excited for more. For a Fulbright-Hays trip to Kenya, I was tasked to teach at three elementary schools and found connection with younger students to be fulfilling, especially in an environment where they were all so eager to learn.

I'm looking forward to discussing my qualifications and seeing if I am a good fit for this team. I thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
Joshua Dale Roberts.
